B. Frank Joy and Revolution Select America's Remote Help Desk

Eldersburg, Maryland – November 8, 2010 - America's Remote Help Desk (ARHD) is pleased to announce their entry into business relationships with B. Frank Joy, LLC and Revolution, LLC.

Based in Hyattsville, Maryland, B. Frank Joy is a regional leader providing comprehensive utility contracting, construction management and engineering services for underground infrastructure projects. Recent significant growth has been attributed to the companies' commitment to new technologies that allow remote inspection and rehabilitation of aging pipes, avoiding costly and disruptive excavation. ARHD will be providing a comprehensive IT solution that includes Help Desk and network engineering support.

Launched by Steve Case (Co-Founder of AOL) in 2005, Revolution invests in people and ideas that can change the world. The Washington, D.C.-based company focuses its time and capital on growth equity opportunities, while also placing bets on earlier stage companies and complementing that with a diversified investment approach to real estate and hospitality. ARHD will initially be providing network engineering support for Revolution.

“We are excited to add these industry leaders to our portfolio of clients. We continue to entrench ourselves in the venture capital community with the addition of Revolution, while B. Frank Joy offers us new opportunities to prove our abilities to the engineering and contracting industry,” stated Rich Rubinstein, ARHD President and CEO. “We continue to align ourselves with premier companies who make a difference in their field.
